RUN NO. 86 – BULLSHIT & DROP SHORT'S BECORA BACKTRACKS BACKTRACKING RUN

Setting the Run

To be honest, we rode around the area on Bullshit's motorbike for three hours on Saturday afternoon putting the fear of God into stray chickens and small snotty nosed children. By the time we had weaved our way through a number of possible tracks and knocked down clothes lines, bamboo fences, and the occasional little old betelnut-chewing signora, we had decided to divide the run into two Hash Hold Check with the one main Hold at the Buddhist Temple where we would all meet up.

By this time we had ridden around the track so many times that we even had a group of children who had formed our own personal fan club. They would start to chant Malai, Malai, Malai as they heard the motor bike approaching and then they tried to stick branches through the spokes of the front wheel as we roared through their front yard. There was also a group of young teenage boys playing soccer in the dry riverbed of the Tibesie River who became thoroughly disgruntled with us disturbing their soccer game so they decided that throwing stones at us was a far more productive pastime. Mind you two middle aged Malai driving continually around a 7.5 kilometer circuit on a Harley Davidson look-alike motor bike arguing like the Odd Couple must sooner or later attract the attention of the locals.

To break the boredom of riding around in circles we even stopped to participate in one of the local cock fights at the back of the Tibesei markets and watch a group of East Timorese men gamble away the equivalent of the Gross Domestic Product of the country on two scrawny chickens that would not have even made the shelves of a Woolworth's deli.

Due to the impending rain and the increasing accuracy of the stone wielding soccer players we decided to reconvene on Sunday afternoon with cans of yellow paint to mark out the course. We thought that marking the course with yellow paint was not only innovative but would ensure that our particular run went down in the annals of Dili Hash House Harriers as being the best marked run in recorded history. Hell, we even brought along three tins of spray paint and two kilos of flour as a backup. Little did we realize that the mango season was in full swing and the rotting and discarded mangoes which litter the streets of Dili also leave a distinctive yellow trail. Well at least it gave the Unbelievers something to whine about at the Circle after the run.

Given the amount of time that we had to set out the course and that we had only finished marking the course ten minutes before the Hash commenced it worked out much better than we expected.

The Run

The runners had about eight kilometers of winding their way through markets, back streets and canals to end up back at the Monkey Bar. Though the Hounds appeared to be a rather "lethargic pack" hanging back at the intersections with the Hare rather than hunting for signs of a trail, (This is a trick that as a past hound I thought I was the only one to stoop to such lazy low hound behaviour – Bullshit which was bountifully laid and more obvious than even the ripest mango. Meanwhile the walkers ambled behind more concerned with the local Dili gossip than whether the rotting mangoes were really yellow markers or not.

In all not a bad day, but next time we will use pink spray paint!!

The Truth

Despite the uncertainties of the trail marking ordeal this turned out to be a very good, well balanced run with something for everyone.

It had some good running stretches for the FRBs to show off, plenty of check-it-outs for the rest to get their breath, a (legitimate) short cut or two for the slackers and a sensible length On Home.

Well done Hares.

Merry Christmas! Merry Christmas! Merry Christmas!

CIRCLE CIRCUS

Back to the resurrected Monkey Bar the home of our T shirt sponsor. Good to see it back in business. We hope our performance didn't frighten away too many other patrons.

Still the Newbies continue to pour in. Another eight stepped forward this week and we treated them generously since we hope to see most of them again. Sadly we also said farewell to six stalwarts though, fortunately, at least two will be back in the new year.

The GM obviously wasn't in a hurry this week because he strung out the proceedings a bit more than he usually does. He is probably making the most of his last few weeks as GM as he will hand over the reins to his Vice GM when Laceration returns from leave on 20 Jan 02.

Psycho will also take over as our new Vice GM at the same time.

Down down honours were fairly evenly spread this week with some relative Newbies very prominent with their thirst and the speed of their disposal.

Cats Piss returned to perform no less than eight namings in the regular session, then, with the help of the Circle a ninth was spontaneously named along with the POTW award.

The POTW award was particularly deserved, though whether it was the result of a deliberate act or just lucky timing was not revealed. Perhaps Coitus and Salsa enlighten us next week. Though Salsa would probably rather forget all about it.
